I watched the election results until I realized that Trump was the winner and I went to sleep. There was no need to further lose my sleep. So it was no surprise seeing the headlines on television this morning.

It's a normal day of many rejoicing and the unsusl sad faces. The reality will set in next year when the cabinet is announced and the trials begin. Just remember one thing that who God bless no man curse and get away. There is always consequences for our actions.

Have a great day
