SHOCKING! A 24-year-old female tourist from Germany has reportedly given birth to a litter of German Shepherd puppies in Stellenbosch, Western Cape Province in South Africa, after being hospitalized with severe stomach pains.

Doctors at a Western Cape private hospital were surprised to see Kedder go into labor, as she didn't know she was pregnant.

"It was even more of a shock when three tiny puppies came out instead of a baby," said Dr. Brown of the Medical Center where Kedder gave birth to her 'puppies'.

"To be honest, we didn't know this was possible. It's both a marvel of modern medicine and extremely disturbing at the same time."

Kedder admits that while she was recently living at home, she would often have sex with the family dog, Jonsey, because she couldn't find a date.

It all started when my parents moved to a new place while we were still based in Germany. I lost my job, and my boyfriend dumped me too," said Kedder. "I didn't have time to meet any 📖 new guys while I was applying for jobs, so I would sometimes have sex with Jonsey our dog, just to relieve myself of too much stress. I don't think it was wrong. He's a big dog, and he wasn't hurt by it. In fact, he really seemed to like it. I know I did. And besides, back in our country having sex with an animal is not a crime, and I don't giving birth to an animal would either be a crime here provided the act wasn't committed in this country," she said.

According to Dr. Brown, Kedder's birth is the first on record for an inter-species relationship.